THE tone of the Democratic press the country over, and especially here at the Capital of the Nation, has been unfavorable to the PARNELL-DILLON exploit in behalf of suffering Ireland. The Republican press, on the contrary, reflecting the true inspiration of that party in its sympathy for the oppressed and its habitual encouragement to the cause of liberty and progress, has, with rare exceptions, tendered the most cordial welcome to those gentlemen. And it is a significant fact that, while the movement in this community has been carefully guarded against the encroachment of partisan influences, its management has natucally devolved upon Republican leaders.
